At Bloomington Montessori School, transparency is key to building trust with our community. Our goal is to provide clear and accessible information about our operations, finances, and the principles that guide us. Below, you will find answers to frequently asked questions highlighting how we manage our school and financial practices and ensure every decision supports our mission of nurturing and educating our students. We are committed to openness and welcome you to reach out if you need more information or have additional questions.

Is the school a 501(c)(3) public charity?

Bloomington Montessori School is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. This means that we operate for educational purposes and serve the public interest, allowing contributions to be tax-deductible.

What is the school's mission?

We aim to guide students from self-discovery to global citizenship through Montessori education.

Who runs the school?

Bloomington Montessori School is governed by a Board of Directors composed of dedicated community members and parents. Our head of School and administrative staff manage daily operations, supported by a talented team of certified Montessori teachers.

How does the school determine tuition rates?

Tuition rates are determined by considering the school's operational costs, including teacher salaries, classroom materials, facilities maintenance, and other necessary expenses. We strive to keep tuition as affordable as possible while maintaining the quality of education and care for our students.

Can I donate to the school?

Absolutely! As a 501(c)(3) non-profit, we welcome donations from individuals and organizations who want to support our mission. Your generosity helps provide scholarships, maintain facilities, and enrich our educational programs.

Where does my money go when I donate to the school?

Donations go toward various initiatives that directly benefit our students, such as financial aid, classroom improvements, teacher professional development, and maintaining our campus. We ensure that your contributions enhance our students' quality of education and experiences.

Where can I find the school's financial documents?

Financial documents, including annual reports and IRS Form 990, are available on our website.
